Chapter 1 by Brock Thompson

The final bell rang 77 times the day time got lost. Michael could barely stand it. One second, (or minute, or whatever it was) it seemed to ring really fast, never stopping. The next, it was a lifetime between each shriek.

Michael had watched in amazement as the sun seemed to move swiftly below the horizon, and then COME BACK UP.

His language teacher fainted.

He got up, and walked over to his crush. He grabbed her face, and kissed her, deeply.

Fuck it, time was lost, it seemed like the end of the world. The bell rang one more time, and the class got up. They all ran out of the classroom.

Michael and his crush were the only ones left. She looked up at him from her seat, and he looked her in the eyes. They were so beautiful. They were blue, and they had an orangish tint to it. Her cheeks were blushing, cause secretly, Michael was her crush, too.
